"My name is Ayanda Mateza i grew up in Eastern Cape in small village called Bangindlala where there was scarce of internet as the result I passed my grade 12 and I was struggling to apply online because there was no internet. Then I decided to come to Cape Town in 2014 where I was exposed places like libraries and the internet I asked someone to help to register myself on the computer because I was not good on it but I learn how to use a computers bit by bit while I was going at the library every day and I using internet there it help a lot internet because I saw a learn ship there of an computer end user. Then they phoned saying I am taken for the learnship since from that day I thanked to the internet because it has changed my life and it help a lot because now I know to read the news from overseas and know what is happening from other countries. Threw the internet we can even communicate with someone who is very far away from you now at home they ask me every day what is the temperature or the next day because I really know.

 I don't have to wait for the news to see the weather I just go to internet and shows me, internet it has really changed my life now I know how to use a computer and I don't have to go door to door to look for a job I just go to internet it will give all I need my life would be difficult without an internet

The Internet changed our life enormously; there is no doubt about that. There are many advantages of the Internet that show you the importance of this new medium. What I want to say is that Internet changed our life in a positive way.As we all know, software costs a lot, if you buy it legal. Free software, free music is available on the Internet. You just have to download the program, the mp3-file or whatever and that's it."
