1. Introduction

This Directory of Free Public Internet Access Points in the Western Cape aims to provide an information resource to members of the public wishing to locate and use free or discounted computer and Internet access facilities in the Western Cape. This is the first known resource of this nature. It is hoped that further facilities will be added to the Directory of Public Access Points in the Western Cape as the demand for public access points increases in the region.

Public access points, also known as public access facilities, cybercentres, Internet business centres, multi-purpose community centres, publinets, or telecentres, offer free or discounted access to the Internet, email and computers. This Directory of Public Access Points in the Western Cape does not include those access points only open to guests of hotels and lodges or other public venues such as restaurants or airports with wireless hotspots. Nor does it list paid-for online access services offered by Internet cafés.¹ Rather, the focus of this information resource is on those areas with public access points where municipal services or donor-supported initiatives provide information and technology access to previously disadvantaged communities in rural and urban areas of the Western Cape.

The importance of documenting these access points in the region is crucial to ensuring that citizens know where they can access the support infrastructure for e-government services. The provision of online services by government departments is a component of e-government service delivery; that is, providing access to information in electronic formats to citizens via the Internet or via a computer terminal.

This Directory of Free Public Internet Access Points in the Western Cape is an initiative of Cape Gateway to promote access to the Internet and hence e-government services. Cape Gateway is an information portal for government and related information and can be accessed online at www.capegateway.gov.za.

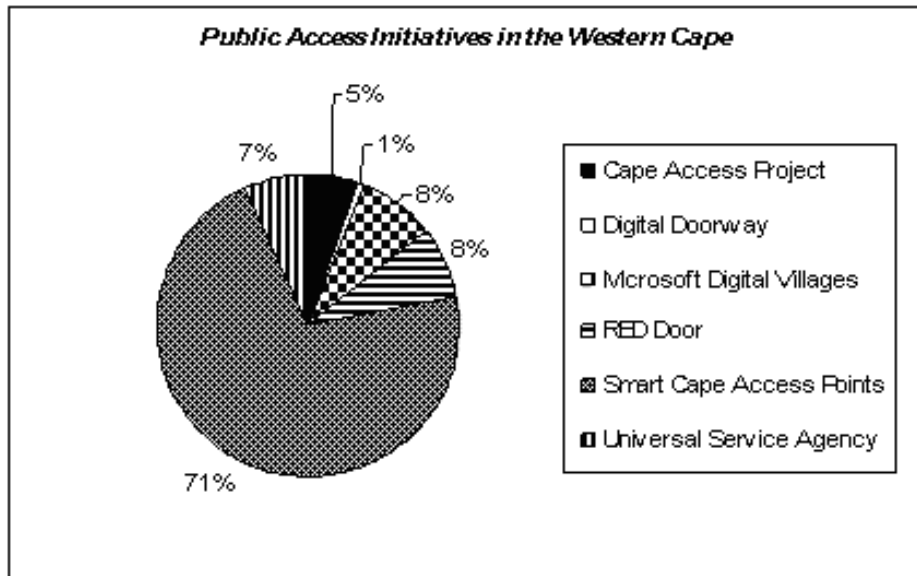

2. Public Access Points in the Western Cape

2.1 Overview

There are 114 public access points in the Western Cape, 82% of which are located in the Cape Town municipal area.

The majority of these (71% of all public access points) are part of the Smart Cape Access Project, a City of Cape Town initiative providing free public access to the Internet at municipal libraries.

The Cape Access Project, a provincial government initiative to provide access points in the rural areas, makes up a further 5% of all regional public access initiatives. The Microsoft Digital Villages, a corporate social responsibility programme primarily supporting townships surrounding Cape Town as well as Paarl, George and Worcester areas, makes up 8% of all facilities. A further 8% of the public access points are housed within the Real Enterprise Development (RED Door) Programme, a provincial government business support initiative for small, medium and micro enterprises implemented in all regions of the Western Cape. The Digital Doorway programme accounted for one (that is, 1%) public access point in the Cape Town area.

The Universal Service Agency, a government programme geared to support telecommunication services and access in under-served areas, has deployed eight community telecentres in the Western Cape, that is, 7% of all public access points in the region.² While these are included in the directory, however, it should be noted that these Universal Service Agency access services are charged for at a reduced rates.

² For further information on Universal Service Agency's community telecentres see www.usa.org.za/telecentres.html.

Outside of these public access facilities are two school focused programmes. The Khanya Schools Project (an initiative of the Western Cape Education Department) which supports the delivery of curriculum to learners via technology. There are a number of schools within the Western Cape that offer access to PCs and the Internet, however, this educational initiative is largely only available to school-going learners.³ A further learner-specific access programme is tuXlabs, an Open Source resource centre initiative in over 160 schools nationally. TuXlabs is sponsored by the Shuttleworth Foundation.⁴

2.2 List of Public Access Points in the Western Cape

The list of free and discounted public access points in the Western Cape, excluding the Khanya Schools Project and the tuXlabs initiative, is set out in the sections below. The public access points are listed alphabetically per location (i.e. per suburb and/or town) for each of the six regions within the Western Cape.

2.2.1 Cape Town Metropolitan Area

There are 94 public access points in the Cape Town metropolitan area, i.e. the Cape Town Unicity. This total is made up of the following public access initiatives:

- 81 Smart Cape Access Points in the local municipal libraries.
- 6 facilities are part of Microsoft Digital Villages initiative.
- 3 RED Door access points for entrepreneurs.
- 3 facilities supported by the Universal Services Agency.⁵
- 1 Digital Doorway e-learning project.

³ To view a list of all Khanya schools go to www.khanya.co.za/schools.

⁴ See www.tuxlabs.org.za/tuxlabs.html.

⁵ Only 2 Cape Town-based Universal Service Agency telecentres are listed here. The details for Khayelitsha Development Forum facility are forthcoming.

3. A Note on Research Method

The research methods included online desk research to identify public access facilities and a telephonic survey to verify details and services. The first port of call was the Smart Cape Access Point and Cape Access Points projects to update contact information for these facilities. Respondents were also asked to identify any other access points in the area as a means to gather further information on the location of public access points.

Thereafter, several respondents from various stakeholder interest groups were approached and/or websites assessed to attempt to identify further public access programmes in the Western Cape. The list of research contacts is set out below.

Government

City of Cape Town, CSIR, Provincial Government of the Western Cape, Universal Service Agency and national government (Government Communication and Information System (GCIS)).

NGO and Civil Society

Balancing-Act, Communications Users Forum of South Africa (CUASA), SANGONET, and The Shuttleworth Foundation.

Business Associations and Business Support Agencies

RED Door.

Corporate Sector

Cell C, Microsoft South Africa, MTN, Vodacom.
