Subject: RE: Presentation Preferential Procurement Regulations 2022

Good day Pauline

Please note that during the presentation at the induction sessions held, it was explained by the presenter to the attendees that Regulation 10 of the PPR 2022 repeals the 2017 Regulations in their entirety, including any designation circulars or instructions saved under the PPR 2017 in terms of regulation 16. In other words, the instructions and circulars issued in term of the PPR 2011 and PPR 2017 respectively, no longer have legal authority from the 16th of January 2023, except where they are used to evaluate a tender advertised before the effective date of the PPR 2022. Therefore, there will not be a formal communication as regulation 10 of the PPR 2022 is clear that it repeals the PPR 2017. We can confirm that a process is underway to remove all Designated Sector Circulars and Instructions from a list of active Circulars and Instructions so as to eliminate confusion.

Kind regards
Pumeza

Good day Leanda

I trust you are well.

With reference to the attached presentation and below email, it was indicated that the Local Production and Content instruction notes and circulars issued since 2012 will be repealed.

By virtue of the PPR's, 2022 applicability as from 16 January 2023 it is assumed that the Local Production and Content requirements are no longer applicable however kindly confirm whether a formal notice in terms of the repeal of the said instructions and circulars will be issued to Provinces as well as the expected envisage date of the notice.

The instruction notes and circulars are still on NT's website under issued instructions/circulars which may cause confusion.

Please advise, thank you.

Kind regards

Good day Leanda

Trust this email finds you well

The attached presentation presented at the National joint SCM forum bears reference.

It was indicated in the forum that all local production and content instructions and circulars issued since 2012 will be repealed.

Can you kindly confirm whether a formal notice in terms of the repeal of said instructions and circulars will be issued to Provinces as well as the expected envisage date of the notice.

Your assistance in terms of the above request will be appreciated.

Kind Regards
