There is an increasing belief amongst academics and authorities that the current socio-economic problems encountered in South Africa are greatly attributed to the alarmingly high rate of illiteracy amongst large sectors of the population.

Part of the problem is directly related to the fact that in the past the majority of the South African population, including most school-going children, have been deprived of exposure to quality reading and study material, because they do not have access to library facilities. This applies in particular to rural areas.

Afribuka's solution to the need for library facilities is the Wheelie Bookwagon - an affordable, compact, mobile and durable library unit that includes a starter pack, which is suitable for schools, community centres or libraries, hospitals, old-age homes, hostels, children's homes, prisons, or other community facilities. The starter pack consists of the following:

- a choice of 100, 200 or 300 books of general and/or educational nature, including readers, reference books and a dictionary and/or encyclopaedia. Alternative book packages can be made up
- three educational posters
- a manual with valuable information on starting a resource centre and managing the library unit as full-fledged library.
